Coverage	11 complete English areas
Training MCQs	225 topic-wise questions
Full Mock	75 mixed PMA-style questions
Comprehension	5 original passages + 25 questions
Answer Support	Answer key + concise explanations
Purpose	Practice-oriented; not an official PMA paper

Designed for rapid revision and timed practice

Use the rules first. Attempt MCQs without looking at the key. Review every mistake by rule, not by memory.

How to Use This Guide

1. First pass: learn the rule tables and examples. Do not rush into MCQs if the underlying rule is unclear.
2. Second pass: attempt each 20-question topic set under light time pressure. Mark every uncertain item, even if you guessed correctly.
3. Error review: classify each mistake as rule gap, vocabulary gap, careless reading, or time-pressure error. Correct the cause.
4. Final pass: attempt the 75-question mixed mock without notes. Then review only the questions you missed or guessed.

Exam principle: PMA initial-test English is usually speed-sensitive. Accuracy matters, but the practical skill is rapid recognition of standard grammar, vocabulary, and reading patterns. Train both rule knowledge and decision speed.

1. Parts of Speech

Parts of speech classify words by the job they perform in a sentence. A word can change category depending on use, so identify function in context rather than memorizing a single label.

What You Must Know

- Noun: names a person, place, thing, idea, quality, or activity. Types include proper, common, collective, abstract, material, countable, and uncountable nouns.
- Pronoun: replaces or points to a noun. Major types: personal, possessive, reflexive, demonstrative, interrogative, relative, indefinite, and reciprocal.
- Verb: expresses action, occurrence, or state. Distinguish main verbs, auxiliary verbs, modal auxiliaries, finite verbs, non-finite forms, transitive verbs, and intransitive verbs.
- Adjective: modifies a noun or pronoun. It may describe quality, quantity, number, possession, or identity. Participles can function adjectivally: a broken window; a smiling child.
- Adverb: modifies a verb, adjective, another adverb, or sometimes a whole clause. Common classes include manner, place, time, frequency, degree, and viewpoint.
- Preposition: shows relationship, usually between a noun phrase and another element: in the room, after lunch, with courage.
- Conjunction: joins words, phrases, or clauses. Coordinating: for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so. Subordinating: because, although, if, when, unless, while, etc.
- Interjection: expresses a sudden reaction or feeling: Alas!, Hurrah!, Oh!, Bravo! Articles/determiners (a, an, the, this, each, some) limit or specify nouns.

Common trap: Do not classify a word by spelling alone. "Fast" can be an adjective (a fast car) or adverb (drive fast). "Running" can be a verb, adjective, or gerund depending on its function.

2. Tenses

English tense questions test time reference, aspect, sequence of events, signal words, and consistency. The essential distinction is not simply past/present/future; you must also know simple, continuous, perfect, and perfect continuous forms.

What You Must Know

- Simple present: base verb / s-form. Uses: habits, routines, facts, timetables, universal truths. Example: He trains daily.
- Present continuous: am/is/are + -ing. Uses: action happening now, temporary situations, arranged near future. Stative verbs such as know, believe, own, belong are not normally used continuously.
- Present perfect: has/have + past participle. Uses: past action linked to present, life experience, unfinished time, action with present result. Avoid it with finished time expressions such as yesterday or last year.
- Present perfect continuous: has/have been + -ing. Emphasizes duration or repeated ongoing activity: She has been studying for two hours.
- Simple past: past form. Completed events at a definite past time. Past continuous: was/were + -ing for background or interrupted past actions.
- Past perfect: had + past participle. Use for the earlier of two past events when sequence needs clarification. Past perfect continuous emphasizes duration before a past point.
- Future: will + base for predictions/spontaneous decisions; be going to for prior plans or evidence-based predictions; future continuous for action in progress at a future time; future perfect for completion before a future deadline.
- Conditionals: zero = facts; first = real future possibility; second = unreal/hypothetical present-future; third = unreal past. Watch verb combinations carefully.

Common trap: Signal words help but do not replace meaning. "Since" marks a starting point; "for" marks duration. "By" often points to completion before a deadline and may trigger a perfect tense.

Tense Formula Snapshot

Tense	Core form	Typical use
Present simple	V1 / V1+s	habit, fact
Present continuous	am/is/are + V-ing	action now/temporary
Present perfect	has/have + V3	past linked to present
Past simple	V2	finished past
Past continuous	was/were + V-ing	past action in progress
Past perfect	had + V3	earlier past action
Future simple	will + V1	prediction/decision
Future perfect	will have + V3	completed before future time

3. Articles

Articles are determined mainly by sound, definiteness, countability, and whether the noun is being used specifically or generically.

What You Must Know

- Use a before a consonant sound: a university, a European, a one-time event. Use an before a vowel sound: an hour, an honest man, an MBA.
- Use the for something specific or already known, unique objects, superlatives, ordinal numbers, rivers, seas, oceans, deserts, mountain ranges, many newspapers, and certain country names such as the United Kingdom.
- Use no article with plural or uncountable nouns when speaking generally: Books are useful. Honesty matters.
- No article is normally used with languages, academic subjects, sports, continents, most countries, cities, streets, single mountains, and lakes: Urdu, mathematics, cricket, Asia, Pakistan, Mount Everest, Lake Saif-ul-Muluk.
- Institutional nouns can change meaning: go to school = attend as a student; go to the school = go to a particular school building.

Common trap: Choose a/an by pronunciation, not spelling. "University" begins with /ju:/, so "a university"; "hour" begins with a vowel sound, so "an hour".

4. Prepositions

Prepositions are heavily collocational. Many questions cannot be solved by literal translation; the tested phrase must be learned as an English pattern.

What You Must Know

- Time: at 7:00; on Monday/on 14 August; in 2026/in September/in the morning; since 2022; for three years; by Friday = no later than Friday; until Friday = continuing up to Friday.
- Place: at a point; in an enclosed/large area; on a surface. Movement: to, into, onto, across, through, over, along, towards, from.
- Common adjective + preposition patterns: good at, interested in, proud of, afraid of, responsible for, capable of, similar to, different from.
- Common verb + preposition patterns: depend on, belong to, insist on, apply for, listen to, suffer from, consist of, apologize for, agree with a person / agree on a matter.
- Between is standard for two or for clearly separate individual relationships; among is used within a group. Beside = next to; besides = in addition to.

Common trap: Do not add unnecessary prepositions: discuss the issue (not discuss about), enter the room (not enter into the room in ordinary transitive use), request something from someone.

5. Active and Passive Voice

Voice changes the focus of a sentence. Active voice makes the doer the grammatical subject; passive voice makes the receiver of the action the subject. The basic passive formula is appropriate form of BE + past participle.

What You Must Know

- Simple present: writes -> is/am/are written. Simple past: wrote -> was/were written.
- Present continuous: is writing -> is being written. Past continuous: was writing -> was being written.
- Present perfect: has written -> has been written. Past perfect: had written -> had been written.
- Future/modal: will write -> will be written; can/must/should write -> can/must/should be written.
- Keep tense and meaning unchanged. Move the active object to subject position. Add "by + agent" only when the agent is important or necessary.
- Only transitive verbs normally form passives because an object is required. Intransitive verbs such as arrive, sleep, die, happen usually cannot be passivized.

Common trap: The passive auxiliary carries tense; the lexical verb remains a past participle. Do not confuse "is being repaired" with "is repaired" or "has been repaired".

Voice Conversion Table

Active pattern	Passive pattern
writes	is/am/are written
wrote	was/were written
is writing	is being written
was writing	was being written
has written	has been written
had written	had been written
will write	will be written
can write	can be written

6. Direct and Indirect Speech

Reported speech changes viewpoint. You must track reporting verb, pronouns, time/place words, tense backshift, and sentence type (statement, question, command, request, exclamation, wish).

What You Must Know

- With a past reporting verb, common backshifts are: present simple -> past simple; present continuous -> past continuous; present perfect -> past perfect; past simple -> past perfect; will -> would; can -> could; may -> might.
- No backshift is normally necessary for universal truths, continuing facts, or when the reporting verb is present/future and the time reference remains valid.
- Time/place changes when perspective shifts: now -> then; today -> that day; yesterday -> the previous day; tomorrow -> the next day; here -> there; this -> that; these -> those.
- Statements: said (that)... / told + object (that)... Questions: asked + if/whether for yes-no questions; asked + wh-word for wh-questions, using statement word order.
- Commands/requests/advice: told/ordered/requested/advised + object + (not) to-infinitive. Exclamations often use exclaimed with joy/sorrow/surprise; wishes may use wished/prayed.

Common trap: Do not keep question inversion in indirect questions. "He asked where I was going" is correct; "where was I going" is not.

Backshift Snapshot

Direct	Typical reported form
am/is/are	was/were present simple	past simple
present perfect	past perfect
past simple	past perfect
will	would
can	could
may	might
now / today / tomorrow	then / that day / the next day

D. verb only

7. Synonyms and Antonyms

Vocabulary matching requires meaning in context, not approximate association. A synonym should preserve the core sense; an antonym should oppose it on the relevant semantic dimension.

What You Must Know

- Learn common high-frequency pairs: commence/begin, terminate/end, conceal/reveal, scarce/abundant, rigid/flexible, hostile/friendly, superior/inferior.
- Watch degree: "annoyed" is not always equal to "furious"; "warm" is not the same as "hot." The closest available option is usually required.
- Use roots and affixes when possible: bene- (good), mal- (bad), anti- (against), pre- (before), post- (after), -less (without), -ful (full of).
- Check part of speech: if the target word is an adjective, prefer an adjective option when meanings are otherwise close.

Common trap: Do not choose a word merely because it belongs to the same topic. "Obstacle" and "journey" may appear together, but "hindrance" is the semantic synonym of "obstacle".

8. Sentence Correction

Sentence correction combines subject-verb agreement, tense, pronouns, articles, prepositions, modifiers, countability, parallelism, comparatives, and idiomatic constructions.

What You Must Know

- Agreement: each/every/either/neither normally takes a singular verb; "one of + plural noun" takes a singular main verb; uncountable nouns such as furniture, information, advice, equipment are singular mass nouns.
- Auxiliaries: after do/does/did, use the base verb. After modals, use the base verb: can go, must work, should study.
- Gerund/infinitive patterns: enjoy doing, avoid doing, deny doing, look forward to doing, be used to doing; decide to do, want to do, plan to do.
- Comparisons: prefer X to Y; senior/junior/superior/inferior to; older than for general age; elder is restricted mainly to family relationships and not normally followed by than in standard exam usage.
- Avoid redundancy: return home, repeat, revert in context; do not say "return back" in formal exam English. Keep modifiers close to what they modify.

Common trap: A sentence can sound familiar and still be wrong. Test grammar explicitly: subject, finite verb, agreement, tense, complement pattern, and modifier placement.

Fast Error-Detection Checklist

5. Locate the subject and finite verb. Check agreement.
6. Check tense/time words and auxiliary + verb form.
7. Check article/preposition/collocation.
8. Check countable vs uncountable noun.
9. Check pronoun reference and comparative structure.

9. Vocabulary

PMA-style vocabulary questions often test precise meanings of formal, academic, administrative, and reasoning-related words. Build active knowledge: definition, synonym, antonym, and one sentence.

What You Must Know

- High-value themes include judgment (prudent, arbitrary, impartial), reasoning (coherent, plausible, explicit, ambiguous), action (mitigate, sustain, allocate, restrain), and character (integrity, resilient, vigilant, diligent).
- Use morphology: "im-" often negates (impartial is not exactly a negative meaning, but means not partial); "-ible/-able" often means capable of; "-tion" often forms nouns.
- Context determines shade: "credible" means believable; "plausible" means apparently reasonable; neither guarantees truth.
- Create contrast pairs: obsolete/current, adverse/favorable, reluctant/eager, concise/verbose, rigid/flexible.

Common trap: Do not infer a word only from emotional tone. Formal vocabulary often has a specific neutral meaning that differs from conversational guesswork.

10. Sentence Completion

Sentence completion tests grammar and logic simultaneously. First determine the relation between clauses, then select a word or structure that is grammatically compatible.

What You Must Know

- Cause/reason: because, since, as. Result: therefore, consequently, so. Contrast: but, yet, however, although, whereas, nevertheless.
- Condition: if, unless (= if not), provided that, in case (precaution, not the same as if). Purpose: to, in order to, so as to, so that.
- Correlative pairs: both...and; either...or; neither...nor; not only...but also; no sooner...than; hardly/scarcely...when.
- Conditional patterns: if + present, will + base; if + past, would + base; if + past perfect, would have + past participle.
- Parallelism matters: linked items should use matching grammatical forms.

Common trap: Read the entire sentence before choosing. A grammatically possible option can still be logically wrong if the connector expresses the wrong relationship.

11. Comprehension

Comprehension questions test main idea, supporting detail, inference, vocabulary in context, tone, purpose, and logical structure. The correct answer must be supported by the passage, not by outside knowledge.

What You Must Know

- Main idea: ask what claim or theme organizes most of the passage. Do not choose a detail that appears only once.
- Detail: return to the exact sentence and verify wording. Beware options that reverse cause and effect or add an unsupported absolute such as always/never.
- Inference: choose what follows reasonably from the text, not what is merely possible in the real world.
- Vocabulary in context: replace the word with each option and check whether meaning and tone fit the sentence.
- Timed strategy: read the question stems quickly, read the passage for structure, answer direct details first, then inference/tone. If one question is consuming excessive time, mark and return.

Common trap: Extreme options are often distractors, but do not reject them automatically; reject them because the passage does not support them.

Timed Reading Method

11. Read for structure: topic, claim, support, contrast, conclusion.
12. Answer direct detail questions before inference/tone.
13. For vocabulary-in-context, replace the word with the option and reread the sentence.
14. Reject options that add facts not in the passage.

PMA-Style Practice MCQs

Passage 1 - Discipline and Performance

Discipline is often misunderstood as mere obedience to rules. In demanding institutions, however, it has a wider meaning. It includes the ability to control impulses, keep commitments, manage time, and continue working even when motivation is low. A disciplined person does not depend entirely on mood. He or she builds routines that make useful action easier and harmful delay less likely. Discipline therefore supports reliability: teammates can predict that a disciplined person will prepare, arrive on time, and complete assigned duties. Yet discipline without judgment can become mechanical. Mature discipline combines consistency with the ability to adapt when circumstances genuinely change.

201. The central idea of the passage is that discipline:

A. is only strict obedience
B. combines self-control, reliability, and judgment
C. depends mainly on motivation
D. prevents all change

202. According to the passage, a disciplined person does NOT depend entirely on:

A. routine
B. mood
C. commitment
D. time management

203. The word "mechanical" most nearly means:

A. automatic and unthinking
B. highly emotional
C. physically strong
D. mathematically exact

204. Which quality is linked directly with discipline in the passage?

A. Reliability
B. Humor
C. Popularity
D. Creativity only

205. The author would most likely agree that good discipline should be:

A. rigid in every situation
B. consistent but adaptable
C. based on fear
D. unrelated to judgment

Passage 2 - Learning from Error

Errors are unavoidable in serious learning. Their value, however, depends on what happens after they are noticed. Repeating an error without analysis produces little improvement. Effective learners identify the cause, correct the method, and test the correction under similar conditions. They also distinguish between a careless mistake and a conceptual misunderstanding. The first may require better attention; the second may require rebuilding knowledge from the foundation. This process can feel slower than simply doing more questions, but it usually produces more durable progress because it changes the mechanism that caused the failure.

206. The passage argues that errors become useful when learners:

A. ignore them
B. analyse and correct their causes
C. repeat more questions immediately
D. avoid difficult topics

207. A conceptual misunderstanding may require:

A. more speed only
B. rebuilding knowledge from the foundation
C. less attention
D. memorizing the same answer

208. The phrase "durable progress" most nearly means progress that is:

A. temporary
B. long-lasting
C. accidental
D. rapid only

A. Easy and hard exams
B. Careless mistakes and conceptual misunderstandings
C. Teachers and students
D. Written and oral work

210. The passage suggests that simply doing more questions can be inferior because it may:

A. be illegal
B. fail to change the cause of error
C. always lower confidence
D. take no time

Passage 3 - Decision Making Under Pressure

Pressure narrows attention. This can be useful when a task demands immediate focus, but it can also make a person overlook information that would normally be considered. Good decision makers therefore use simple structures under stress: they identify the objective, separate facts from assumptions, compare the most realistic options, and consider the likely consequences of each. They also know when time is too limited for perfect information. In such cases, the goal is not certainty but a reasonable decision based on the best available evidence. Afterward, reviewing the outcome helps improve future judgment.

211. According to the passage, pressure can:

A. only improve attention
B. narrow attention and cause information to be overlooked
C. eliminate uncertainty
D. make all decisions easy

212. Good decision makers separate:

A. facts from assumptions
B. speed from strength
C. leaders from teams
D. rules from laws only

213. When perfect information is impossible, the goal should be:

A. total certainty
B. a reasonable evidence-based decision

C. no decision at all
D. a random choice

214. Why review the outcome afterward?

A. To assign blame
B. To improve future judgment
C. To avoid evidence
D. To make the original decision perfect

215. The tone of the passage is primarily:

A. instructional and analytical
B. comic
C. angry
D. nostalgic

Passage 4 - Teamwork

A team is not effective merely because its members are individually talented. Performance depends on coordination: members must understand the objective, know their responsibilities, share relevant information, and adjust when another member encounters difficulty. Trust reduces the time spent checking whether others will perform basic duties, but trust does not mean the absence of accountability. Strong teams make standards clear and address problems early. They also avoid confusing agreement with unity. Members may disagree about methods while still remaining committed to the same mission.

216. The passage says individual talent alone is:

A. sufficient for teamwork
B. not sufficient for effective team performance
C. harmful
D. unrelated to performance

217. Trust in a team does NOT mean:

A. reduced unnecessary checking
B. absence of accountability
C. confidence in basic duties
D. reliable performance

218. Strong teams should address problems:

A. only at the end
B. early
C. secretly and never openly
D. after standards are removed

219. Members can disagree about methods while still:

A. sharing commitment to the same mission
B. having no unity
C. rejecting all standards
D. avoiding communication

220. The best title would be:

A. Why Talent Is Useless
B. Elements of Effective Teamwork
C. The End of Accountability
D. Individual Competition Only

Passage 5 - Reading Efficiently

Efficient reading is not the same as reading every line at maximum speed. Skilled readers vary their pace according to purpose. They may scan a page to locate a date, skim an article to grasp its main argument, or read slowly when a paragraph contains dense reasoning. They also monitor comprehension. If a key sentence is unclear, they pause, reread, and connect it with surrounding ideas. This flexible approach is especially useful in timed tests, where spending too long on one difficult sentence can reduce the time available for easier questions.

221. Efficient readers vary their pace according to:

A. page color
B. purpose
C. handwriting
D. mood only

222. To locate a specific date quickly, a reader may:

A. scan

B. memorize the whole page

B. grasp the main argument or general idea
C. translate every sentence
D. check spelling

224. If a key sentence is unclear, skilled readers should:

A. guess and move on always
B. pause, reread, and connect it with context
C. stop the test
D. ignore the paragraph entirely

225. In timed tests, spending too long on one sentence can:

A. increase all scores automatically
B. reduce time for easier questions
C. make scanning impossible forever
D. guarantee comprehension
